HB 619 (Senfronia Thompson)

Improving the Early Childhood Education Workforce

Early childhood educators play a critical role in our state. In addition to setting the foundation for our children's academic, health, and social development, early educators contribute to Texas's economic success by providing the care necessary for many families with young children to work. Despite being an essential occupation, Texas early educators often receive extremely low wages, limited training or opportunities for advancement, and few benefits. Because child care centers are often owned and staffed by low-income women of color, opportunities exist to address racial disparities in the child care workforce.

- The average hourly wage of an early educator in Texas is $9, which equates to about $19,000 per year (2018).
- Roughly 56% qualify for at least one form of public benefit, such as Medicaid or the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (2018).
- Due to COVID-19, many Texas programs have been forced to furlough staff, reduce wages, or layoff educators to help manage expenses.

Child care educator salaries, especially those in programs accepting subsidy payments, do not reflect the complexity of the job. In addition, earnings do not significantly increase as educators earn higher degrees and progress within their careers. Early educators face limited career advancement opportunities, as a result the industry struggles to retain quality-trained educators.

POLICY RECOMMENDATION

Require Texas Workforce Commission to develop a statewide plan with goals for helping educators achieve credentials and degrees, earn living wages, and utilize the Texas Early Childhood Professional Development System and Workforce Registry.

If Texas hopes to sustain a high-quality early education workforce, it needs a statewide plan with strategic goals. Specifically, this plan should include recommendations for

- Improving data collection practices
- Increasing compensation and reducing turnover
- Eliminating racial and gender pay disparities
- Strengthening paid professional development and career pathways, including apprenticeships
- Improving local workforce board support systems, technology, and participation in the Texas Early Childhood Professional Development System
